Message from the Director

I arrived at the CFW a year ago, humbled by the legacy of leading an organization celebrating 50 years of service. I immediately began visiting the region staff and grantee programs. You think you know about domestic violence and the lives it touches, but the numbers don't tell the whole story. It's the faces of children trailing behind their mother carrying all that they could grab in garbage bags before fleeing to the safety of a shelter. Why garbage bags? It was the only thing she had time to fill before he came home. The image of this family stays with me as I talk to legislators, their staff and others about why we need an NC Council for Women. Domestic violence is the number one cause of homelessness for women and their children. North Carolina entrusts over 10 million in funding to the Council to distribute to 206 partnering agencies to help its citizens. The fund also supports 71 domestic violence shelters. In 2013-2014, over 74,000 people received services to flee abusive partners, become self sufficient or re-build their lives after surviving sexual assault. Fast forward to October 2014 when the Council for Women celebrated its inaugural Women & Girls Initiative at the Governor's Mansion. There we encouraged leadership among young girls so that they avoid abusive relationships and will not need domestic violence services. I'm grateful for the dedication of the NC Council for Women Advisory Board and NC Domestic Violence Commission members and look forward to new challenges in the coming year.

*Executive Director
Gale McKoy Wilkins*

Executive Summary

In many ways the NC Council for Women celebrated a landmark year in 2014. This was the year that the organization's volunteer leaders, staff and partners collaborated to achieve the following goals:

- We celebrated our 50th Anniversary as an advocate agency working on behalf of women and families.
- We sponsored innovative programming to raise awareness of modern day slavery/human trafficking in NC
- We administered $7.7 million to domestic violence and sexual assault grantees to sustain vital services and shelters. The CFW contract approval process was streamlined and the first payment to grantees was distributed in September 2014.
- Successfully transferred the $2.4 million federal Family Violence and Prevention Services program grant benefitting 89 shelters and prevention strategies from the NC Department of Health and Human Services to NC Council for Women.
- Convened the inaugural Women and Girls Initiative at the Governor's Executive Mansion.
- Challenged women to live healthy by sponsoring a Go Red heart disease awareness event.
- Citizens and leaders participated in the NC Status of Women in Robeson County Forum as well as the Status of Women in Eastern NC Forum. CFW engaged local communities to build awareness of the data and resources available to create solutions. This concludes the Council's series of regional status reports.
- Supported the eNOughNC public awareness campaign to broaden support for domestic violence services in Central North Carolina.
- Co-sponsored the first North Carolina Women Veterans Summit & Expo.

Charles Campbell, II (newly appointed Domestic Violence Commission Chair) and Debbie West (NC Council for Women Advisory Board Chair).

During my second year as Executive Director I believe the Council is uniquely positioned to advocate and inform the governor and legislators about the issues impacting women and their families. As I spoke to the National Associations of Commissions for Women this summer, I promoted our accomplishments and recognized the tremendous support provided by the NC General Assembly and the NC Department of Administration. As a state agency with extremely qualified professional staff who work diligently to monitor funding, ensure accountability, while providing program development, training, and I know the Council for Women's original founders would be very proud. More innovation and teamwork is required as we look ahead to improve the lives of NC's women and we are up to the challenge.

Looking Ahead: 2015

As we look to the future and the many challenges facing women in NC, the Council Advisory Board has identified the following priorities:

- Seek opportunities for funding to support economic self-sufficiency for women in transition. Educate legislators on unintended consequences of eliminating GS 143B-394.8, the Displaced Homemaker program for women seeking second chances to establish economic self-sufficiency. Services needed include financial literacy, job training and placement, stipends for education/training and child care for women in mid-life transition.
- Sustain current levels of funding for 206 domestic violence and sexual assault/rape crisis center services in NC In 2013-2014, over 13,000 survivors of sexual assault sought services from state funded and approved agencies.
- On February 18, 2015, host the Go Red event.
- The Council will collaborate with the NC Independent Colleges & Universities group on the Women Economic Empowerment project designed to help female college freshmen who haven't declared a major select a major through exposure to a variety of choices including the science technology engineering and mathematics fields. The following schools will participate in the program: Davidson College, Duke University, Livingstone College, Salem College and St. Augustine's University.
- Continue support of eNOughNC campaign as well as the eNOugh campaign in Buncombe County.

Dr. Kimberly S. Yarnall discusses heart disease prevention at the Go Red event.

The Domestic Violence Commission has identified the following priorities:

- Convene a vision summit (July 2015) to address the critical challenge of how best to address the issue of child-exposure to domestic violence. The Commission's Victims Service Sub-Committee, in conjunction with the UNC at Chapel Hill School of Social Work, will host the summit to generate a statewide plan for addressing childhood exposure to domestic violence and enable North Carolina to be a national leader in preventing this serious type of family violence.
- Support a project to train first responders on how to identify domestic violence survivors. The project is the focus of the Education & Training Sub-Committee.
- Approve funding for Batterer Intervention Program staff and monitoring tools to ensure accountability for prevention – oriented services. There are currently 51 programs providing training for court-ordered participants.
- Host the Human Trafficking Roundtable (March 18, 2015) in collaboration with the Human Trafficking Commission, NC Coalition Against Human Trafficking, NC Governor's Crime Commission and advocates working to develop strategies to engage, inform and expand solutions to this issue which impacts women, children and men in NC. Incredibly important work is being done in the anti-human trafficking movement yet it's fragmented and not well coordinated as it could be in North Carolina.

“As many as 25% of all NC women experiencing domestic violence in their lifetimes, and many of them have children regularly exposed to domestic violence with serious consequences well-being.”

- Dr. Rebecca Macy, Domestic Violence Commission member

Dr. Kenneth B. Morris , Jr. spoke with Southeast Raleigh Magnet high school students prior to the Living History Symposium.

NC Council for Women's Mission

The NC Council for Women (CFW), established in 1963, advises the Governor, state departments and the General Assembly on issues impacting women in North Carolina. CFW administers state funding to domestic violence and sexual assault programs at the county level. CFW administered the final funding to the displaced homemaker programs. CFW monitors the programs through region staff that also provide technical assistance and non-profit board development when needed. CFW staffs the NC Council for Women Advisory Board and NC Domestic Violence Commission. The Advisory Board members are appointed by the Governor to serve two-year terms. The Governor, NC Speaker of the House and NC President Pro Tempore appoint Commission members to serve two-year terms.

Batterer intervention programs seek to re-educate abusers on their behavior, break unhealthy habits and learn new ways to interact with their families. CFW must certify the programs before the court system can refer people to it.

2013-2014 Impact on North Carolina

In 2012, CFW commissioned the creation of the Status of Women in NC report along with 12 regional status briefing papers. The majority of the reports were released and presented in the early half of 2013. In the fall of 2013, CFW presented the Status of Women in Eastern, NC report to leaders in multiple counties throughout the 20 county region covered by the data. The report provided information on women in the areas of education, employment, health, poverty and child care. In the summer of 2014, the presentation of the Status of Women in Robeson County, NC report drew many participants from across the county to hear the data as well as learn of organizations addressing some of the challenges highlighted. CFW partners for the status report presentations included: Institute for Women's Policy Research and Southeastern Family Violence Center.

Heart Disease is the number two killer of North Carolina's women. CFW hosted its first ever Go Red event in which participants learned from a medical doctor about the disease and how to select healthy meals while traveling/working away from home. CFW partnered with the American Heart Association, NC State Health Plan, Harris Teeter, Fresh Market, NC State Office of Human Resources and the Minority Women Health Project to host the event. Members of the wellness group from several state agencies donated some of their wellness activity hours to volunteer at the event.

Domestic Violence specialists staff the eNOughNC phone bank which helped over 300 citizens in a three hour period.

North Carolina is in the top 10 of states with human trafficking cases. CFW hosted the Living History Symposium in which middle/high school students and adults learned the scope of human trafficking. Holly Austin Smith, a human trafficking survivor, spoke of her experience and highlighted local anti-human trafficking programs while Kenneth B. Morris (direct descendant of Fredrick Douglass & Booker T. Washington) discussed how his family is fighting modern-day slavery. Symposium partners included: Office of the Governor/Office of Community & Constituent Affairs, NC Governor's Crime Commission, NC Coalition Against Sexual Assault, Southeast Raleigh Magnet High School and Hope Community Church.

The NC Division of Veterans Affairs collaborated with CFW and others to host the first Women Veterans Summit & Expo with veterans and their families from across North Carolina to learn about small business loan opportunities and VA education benefits.

NC Department of Health & Human Services asked CFW to assume responsibility for the Family Violence Prevention & Services Act (FVPSA) federal funding for North Carolina. FVPSA provides funding to domestic violence shelters as well as programs that address emerging issues trauma-informed care, and effective interventions for children exposed to domestic violence. The FVPSA transfer occurred in October 2014.

NC Independent Colleges & Universities group created the Women Economic Empowerment project in an effort to help undeclared freshmen women choose a viable career through exposure to the science, technology, engineering and mathematics fields. CFW will collaborate with participating colleges.

Dr. Cynthia Hess presented the Status of Women in Eastern North Carolina report in Greenville, NC.

WRAL invited domestic violence organizations to join its taskforce for the eNOughNC domestic violence awareness campaign for central North Carolina. CFW provided expertise in creating the domestic violence public service announcement. The announcements aired during major sports event during September 2014. A phone bank in which citizens could speak to domestic violence experts reached over 300 people in a three hour period. CFW partnered with the following organization on the Campaign: WRAL/Fox News, NC Coalition Against Domestic Violence, NC Coalition Against Sexual Assault, NC Administrative Office of the Courts, Raleigh Police Department, Dress for Success, Interact, Capitol Broadcasting, Durham Crisis Response Center, Compass Center for Women & Families & UNC-Chapel Hill School of Social Work.

The inaugural Women and Girls Initiative convened middle/high school girls and representatives from women leadership programs from across North Carolina to encourage leadership among girls in their communities.
